

Mollie Goldney

Mollie Goldney (1895-1992) was a psychical researcher noted for contributions to the critical literature on hauntings and physical mediumship.

Life and Career

Kathleen Mollie Goldney was born in 1895 and spent her early life in India where her father was a judge in the civil service. She married there, to a railway network director.

Goldney moved to England in 1933 and undertook training in midwifery at Queen Charlotte's Hospital. She was a Regional Commissioner in the Women's Voluntary Services and was subsequently awarded the MBE for her work there.

Goldney spoke fluent German and was an accomplished pianist.

Psychical Research

Goldney joined the Society for Psychical Research (SPR) in 1927, having become intrigued with Indian firewalking. She joined its governing council in 1942, served as its secretary from 1949 to 1957 and was later appointed a vice-president.

In addition to her work in the SPR, Goldney worked with Harry Price at his National Laboratory of Psychical Research, assisting with the investigation of such mediums as Rudi Schneider and Helen Duncan, whose trial for witchcraft she attended.

Later she collaborated with Eric Dingwall and Trevor Hall on a critical report of Price's Borley Rectory investigation.^{1}

With RG Medhurst, Goldney authored a historical examination of William Crookes's investigations of Florence Cook and other mediums, defending them against charges of experimental incompetence and gullibility.^{2}

Soal-Goldney Experiments

Goldney assisted SG Soal in telepathy experiments in 1941-1943 with Basil Shackleton, whose unusually high success rate was later shown to have been achieved by Soal's covert manipulation of the data. Goldney was not implicated in the deception.^{3}

She took an interest in telepathy experiments later carried out by Soal with two Welsh boys, investigating claims by a sceptical psychologist that the boys might have signalled by means of an ultrasonic whistle inaudible to adults.^{4}
